

01. 건조(하다) ☆

As it hasn't rained for a month, the dry weather continues.

02. 기상

Because of the typhoon, there were many changes to the weather and flights were canceled.

EXAM TIP ▲

Let's learn about the frequently used vocabulary word "기상청 (meteorological administration)."

A meteorological administration is an institution that creates the weather forecast and uses various data to predict and inform people about the coming weather.

e.g. 기상청에서 날씨를 관찰하고 태풍을 예보했다.

The meteorological administration observed the weather and forecast a typhoon.

03. 기온

Because the temperature difference between night and day is large in the fall, you should take care not to catch cold.

04. 기후

Jeju Island, in the south of Korea, has a warm climate so there's a lot of tangerine farming.

05. 내내

In the rainy season in July, it rained throughout the whole month.

06. 녹다

It's so hot that the ice cream I just bought melted and got all over my hand.

07. 대체로

Today's weather will be mainly sunny, but many clouds will form late tonight.

08. 뚜렷하다

In Korea, the four seasons of spring, summer, fall, and winter are distinct.

09. 뜨다

In summer, the time that the sun rises is early.

10. 무더위

As the heatwave continues day and night, many people cannot sleep and are having a difficult time.

11. 민감(하다)

When the weather gets cold, the skin becomes sensitive, so it gets very dry.

12. 변화(하다) ☆

If you watch how people are dressed, you can easily see the change of seasons.

13. 비교(하다) ☆

This winter is comparatively less cold than last winter.

14. 습도

In the summer when it rains a lot, the humidity is high, so laundry doesn't dry well.

15. 쌓이다 ☆

Snow is piled up on the roads so it's slippery.

16. 예보

The meteorological administration predicted that it will snow tomorrow.

17. 예측(하다) ☆

If you want to go see the fall foliage, it's good to look online for a map with foliage predictions and then make plans.

EXAM TIP ▲

Let's learn the difference between "예보" and "예측."

- 예보: Means to inform and report in advance about something that will occur in the future, and is mainly used frequently in "일기 예보 (weather forecasts)."

e.g. 일주일 동안 비가 계속 내릴 것이라고 예보됐다. It was forecast that it would rain continuously for the entire week.

- 예측: Means to think about something in the future and is used often in a variety of situations.

e.g. 두 팀의 실력이 비슷해서 어느 팀이 이길지 예측이 불가능하다. As the two teams are similarly skilled, it's impossible to predict which team will win.

18. 일교차

In weather when there's a large daily temperature range between morning and night, many people catch cold.

19. 일부 ☆

The heatwave will continue across the country today, with afternoon showers in a portion of regions.

20. 적합(하다)

This place is warm and it rains a decent amount, so it's suitable for farming.

21. 전국 ☆

It will rain today across the country.

22. 지방 ☆

In Korean summers, typhoons frequently occur in the southern region, which includes Jeju Island.

BACKGROUND KNOWLEDGE ▲

Let's review the regions of Korea that appear in weather forecasts.

- 중부 지방 Central Region:
서울 Seoul, 경기도 Gyeonggi-do Province,
강원도 Gangwon-do Province, 충청도 Chungcheong-do Province
- 남부 지방 Southern Region:
전라도 Jeolla-do Province, 경상도 Gyeongsang-do Province,
제주도 Jeju-do Province

23. 지역 ☆

In the cool fall, you can see dolphins in the western area of Jeju Island.

24. 철

When the seasons change, I clean my clothes from the past season and put them away in the closet.

25. 체감(하다)

The morning temperature in Seoul is -3 degrees, but it's very windy, so the wind chill temperature [the temperature as we feel it] will be as low as -8 degrees.

26. 측정(하다)

Rainfall refers to the results of measuring how many millimeters of rain fall in an hour.

27. 태양

In the past in Korea, a year was divided into 24 sections depending on the position of the sun, which were used like a calendar.

28. 평균

The average temperature in the spring in Korea is about 12 degrees.

29. 풀리다

It's spring and the weather has warmed up a lot, so people's clothes are becoming lighter and flowers are about to bloom along the road.

30. 환절기

During the change of seasons, since the daily temperature range between day and night is large, you must take good care of your health.
