

01. 공급(하다) ☆

Meat and fish provide protein, one of the nutrients that our bodies require.

02. 권장(하다)

The recommended daily intake of coffee is about 2 cups.

03. 균형

A well-balanced diet refers to a diet that includes an appropriate amount of all nutrients.

04. 단백질

The protein in eggs, meat, etc. is a nutrient that helps build the muscles in our bodies.

05. 분석(하다) ☆

The results of the analysis of 1,000 office workers revealed that the more stress we have, the higher our consumption of calories.

06. 비타민

Tangerines and oranges are rich in vitamins, so they're effective in building immunity.

07. 성분 ☆

When my mother buys food at the supermarket, she carefully checks the lists of ingredients.

08. 소모(하다)

As an exercise that consumes a lot of physical energy, bike riding is effective for dieting.

09. 얻다 ☆

People and animals receive energy through the consumption of food.

10. 에너지

Carbohydrates, proteins, and fats are the three major nutrients that supply energy to our bodies.

11. 열량

Vegetables have few calories, so they're effective for dieting.

12. 영양 ☆

Instant foods like ramyeon are high in calories but lack nutrition.

FREQUENCY TIP ▲

Let's learn about "영양소 (nutrients)" and "영양가 (nutritional value)," which appear frequently on exams.

• 영양소 Nutrients:

Refers to the essential substances that humans receive through the consumption of food in order to sustain life and grow. This includes carbohydrates, proteins, fats, vitamins, etc.

e.g. 영양소를 섭취하다 to consume nutrients,
영양소를 공급하다 to provide nutrients

• 영양가 Nutritional value:

Refers to the value of a food's nutrition.

e.g. 영양가가 있다/없다 to (not) have nutritional value,
영양가가 높다/낮다/풍부하다 to have high/little/ample nutritional value

13. 요소 ☆

Protein is one of the constituent components that make up our bodies.

14. 유지(하다) ☆

Nutrients are substances that humans require in order to sustain life.

15. 자극(하다) ☆

Spicy and salty strong-tasting [stimulating] foods are bad for your health.

16. 전달(하다) ☆

Blood delivers oxygen and nutrients to our bodies.

17. 조절(하다) ☆

My older brother succeeded in his diet by controlling his exercise and eating.

18. 지방² ☆

The oil used when making foods like hamburgers or fried chicken contains fats that are bad for our bodies.

19. 차이 ☆

There is a large difference in the taste and nutrition of rice depending on the method of cultivation.

EXAM TIP ▲

“차이점 (point of difference)” refers to a point that isn’t the same and is different. (Anti.) 공통점 point of similarity

20. 체계 ☆

Broccoli is full of nutrients that are good for our bodies, activating the immune system and helping to prevent disease.

21. 촉진(하다)

There’s a lot of moisture and vitamins in peaches, so in summer, they help to provide moisture and boost one’s appetite.

22. 칼로리

My company developed a low-calorie drink for young customers who are interested in dieting.

23. 칼슘

The calcium in milk helps keep our bones strong.

24. 탄수화물

Carbohydrates are the most basic nutrients in people’s lives.

25. 풍부하다 ☆

As fruits and vegetables are full of nutrition, it’s good to eat a variety of them.

26. 필수

Vitamin A is an essential nutrient for the growth of animals.

27. 함유(하다)

In addition to carbohydrates, potatoes also contain vitamins.

28. 흡수(하다)

The nutrients we consume through food are absorbed into our bodies through the digestive process.
